

The Manager's Guide to Risks and Responsibilities of Driving for Work

Get your team clued up on driver risk management, and kick-start an effective programme for your business.

With driving featuring so high on the list of work-related safety risks, managing the associated risks should be top priority for any business with employees who drive as part of their jobs. As well as supporting the safety of workers and the general public, a comprehensive risk management programme allows you to document the action you have taken to mitigate road risk, and is crucial in keeping workers mindful of their own responsibilities when driving.

If you're not sure where to start, are looking to strengthen and enhance an existing programme, or your company fleet policy is in need of a shake-up, our workshop for managers will help you make sure all bases are covered.

Format	In-person or online workshop
Duration	Half-day (3.5 hours)
Participants	3 - 12

What will we learn?

This workshop has been designed to answer some of the most common questions asked about work-related road safety, helping you to fill in the blanks and put together a fleet policy to suit your business and your workers.

- What is 'driving for work'? Why is it important to manage the associated risks?
- Which laws apply to work-related road safety?
- 'Duty of care' – what it means
- What should a Company Driver Risk Management Programme include, and what are the benefits to your business?
- Points to cover in your policy on business motoring
- Legal compliance – what do companies need to demonstrate?
- Corporate Manslaughter – what does this mean?
- Possible consequences of not adhering to legislation
- How to create a positive health and safety culture within your organisation

Who is it for?

Our course can accommodate up to 12 people, so you can invite team members from across a range of business areas. Those who manage staff who drive for work; those with a responsibility for compliance and training; individuals taking care of fleet administration; even drivers themselves may have something to learn.
